Lieut.-governor Eben S. Draper 1878, of the Technology Corporation, Republican Candidate for Governor of Massachusetts to the College men of New England in a special Interview to "The Tech."

"In a letter recently published in the New York "Times," purporting to have been written by ex-President Cleveland, the authenticty of which, however, has been questioned despite the fact that it shows a marked resemblance to Cleveland's style, the following statement was made, 'People ought to have all confidence in the results of this election for the reason that the voters who are to pass on these great questions are more intelligent and better educated than they have been in any previous national election which has taken place in this country.'

"Whether Cleveland wrote this statement or not, I believe that it shows the great fact that the perpeutity of the insitutions of this nation depends on an educated and intelligent electorate. If this is correct then the man of university or of technological training and education has a very much greater responsibility for the success of his country than has his neighbor who has been less fortunate in these respects."

The lieutenant-governor then addressed himself particularly to men of his alma mater, Technology, as follows: "I urge upon every man who goes to or Chairman Bernard S. Van Renssalaer, Harvard 1910, of Third Division, National Republican College League Calls Attention to Further Duties of Members of New England College Clubs.

Much work has been done by the National Republican College League, the parade being but one of the activities of the New England section. Under the direction of Bernard S. Van Rensselaer, Harvard 1910, head of the third division of the League, arrangements have been made to have college men working at the polls on election day, November 3, and it is believed that much may be acomplished in this way, even by non-voters. The Harvard club has done considerable canvassing for Mitchell Galvin, Republican candidate for Congress, and the chances of his being elected appear favorable at present.

In Massachusetts, Connecticut, and Rhode Island, the states which Rensselaer's division includes, the colleges have been thoroughly canvassed, and Republican clubs formed in most of them. A complete list of the college men who have not registered and do not intend to vote has been sent to the headquarters of the league at Chicago.

Van Renssalaer was much pleased with the arrangements for the parade and the attitude of the police in the matter, and anticipated no trouble from any source, with the possible exception of the few outsiders who might attempt something of the sort, and who could easily be controlled by the police.

COMMUNICATION

Members of the M. I. T. Republican Club:—

In the past the Republican Club has seen the culmination of its activity in a torchlight parade. After an impressive celebration the club has been in the habit of retiring into oblivion for four years.

This year a number of members have expressed a desire to see the club accomplish a more practical service to Republicanism than one grand march with torches. Nor is such service impossible nor without importance. If all the club members could work together energetically during the next four days, Technology could accomplish considerable work for the Republican party. Although Massachusetts is sure to go strong for Taft the result of the state elections is not so certain. Eben S. Draper, Republican candidate for governor of Massachusetts is a Technology graduate of the class of 1878 and is also a member of the corporation. For this reason the coming elections should be of especial interest to every Institute man.

The nature of the practical work which can be done to aid in the election of Mr. Draper is simple. Before election, fellows can use their influence among their friends and neighbors to get out a large Republican vote. On election day any number of men can be used by the State Republican Committee as workers at the polls. This work ought to be popular with anyone who is at all interested in social conditions, or who appreciate the possibility of a little excitement.

The executive committee of the club can organize for active service as many men as can possibly volunteer. All members of the Massachusetts Institute Republican Club are hereby urged to do their utmost for the Republican party and to elect Technology man governor of Massachusetts. Volunteers will please leave their names at the Cage for the executive committee.

graduates from the Institute to consider it his highest duty to attend to the so-called ordinary duties of citizenship and to carry out in full the obligation to others that rests on him because of his superior advantages of education and training."

In closing the interview, Mr. Draper expressed the hope that the parade would go off without a hitch and that no factional strife of any kind would be indulged in. He expressed himself as pleased with the general sentiment against a repetition of the disgraceful affair of four years ago.

STUDENT INDEPENDENCE

President Commends Institute Spirit as Shown by Recent Class Events

President Noyes, at the first convocation of the year, welcomed those who lately joined, into the membership and associations which are the most important advantages which will be derived from the period of study.

In this connection, he said:

"You will find here a characteristic Institute student spirit—one which cannot be matched, I believe, at any other college. Thus, the antagonism between the two lower classes, which in many colleges leads to hazing and rushes, is here replaced by friendly rivalry in athletic contests and by true comradeship between members of the different classes in the numerous student activities. I say this in spite of the recent litle volcanic outbursts between first and second year men; for these have been caused by only a few individuals who haven't yet come to appreciate our student spirit. That spirit is well illustrated by a variety of facts relating to our student life. Thus, in not many institutions, I believe, would the trustees venture to place the management of a dining room doing a business of $30,000 a year or even a club room with all the inherent possibilities of abuse and disorder, in the charge of students, as has been practically done with the new Technology Union by the Institute Corporation; nor in many colleges would the Faculty dare to relinguish all share in the control of athletics. Moreover, in few places have the students collectively taken such sane interest in the promotion of their own welfare. As you know, the Institute Committee has recently adopted the "point system" to avoid excessive participation of individuals in social or athletic activities. The second-year class has taken such action as to do away with the useless and harmful activities of the night before Field Day. The Tech Show management of last year insisted that students should not take major parts who by so doing would be prevented from keeping up with their class. I mention these things so that those of you who have come here for the first time may know that, though you may miss here some of the boyish features of college life, you will find, in place of them, a sounder, more manly sentiment, which is even more condusive to the development of a successful student life."

Cameron Forbes, Harvard 1892, and at present vice-governor of the Philippine Islands, was then introduced by President Noyes, who mentioned the speaker's close connection and hearty interest in Tech affairs.

Mr. Forbes spoke of the problems and aims of Insular-government in general. He then passed to the particular phase of the question he had chosen for his subject "Public Works." He gave an outline of the conditions under the Spanish rule as they existed when the Americans took charge. In the short time they have been there, American engineers have learned lessons from the lasting works of their predecessors and from experience, in regard to the inadvisability of any kind of temporary construction. When the Americans first took possession the policy was to build somehow and quickly, but now every thing is built in a permanent fashion to begin with. The result of this has been a marked economy. Mr. Forbes went on to show the spirit of the Filipinos in taking up the matter of road building. They even increased the taxes on themselves for these purposes.

He closed with a few words on the work Mr. Taft had done in the Islands, the serious problems he had faced and the difficulties he had overcome. He attributed the present state of the government and the co-operation of the natives to his influence and ability.

President Noyes dismissed the convocation with a few words on the torchlight procession which follow:

"I should not speak of this, were it not for serious conflict between our students and the police which took place on a similar occasion four years ago and about which certain incendiary articles have appeared recently in the newspapers. All I wish to do is to make known to you the fact that the trouble of four years ago started simply from one of those unfortunate misunderstandings which sometimes occur in spite of the best intentions on the part of everybody. The police had received orders from the Commissioner of Police, at the request of the Institute authorities, to keep the public off the Rogers steps, in order that the large audience which was attending a Lowell Institute lecture in Huntington Hall that evening might get out. It was not intended that this should apply to Institute students who might gather there after the hall was emptied and the procession was over; but this was not made clear to the police and unfortunately there was no opportunity to make the order itself known to the students. Consequently while on the one hand the students not unnaturally demanded access to their own steps, on the other hand, the police were merely obeying their orders in restraining them. The whole thing, as I say, was simply a misunderstanding. It is true that a few individual members of the police in executing the order used unwarrantable violence; but they were punished for this after a careful investigation; and it is to be remembered that though it is not an excuse it is at least an extenuation that they did this under conditions of great excitement and without any previous experience in dealing with a surging crowd of students. I therefore wish you to realize that there is not the least ground in the world for a feeling of antagonism on your part towards the police of this city; and to express the hope that in order to clearly show the public that you have no such feeling you will assist the police in maintaining the order which the citizens of a great city have a right to demand.

"Just one more word. Possibly you do not all know that the candidate for governor of the party in whose procession you are to march is a former student of the Institute and has been for years actively interested in its welfare. He counts on every Institute man to maintain the honor of his alma mater.

"Finally, let me tell you that you will find no obstacle to the use of Rogers steps tomorrow evening, and that you can gather there for cheering to your heart's content."

With a glare of torches and red fires all along the line and hundreds of transparencies, the parade was a pretty sight as it passed down Park street to Tremont, and then to Boylston. The bright caps and the no less gay regalia of the different clubs participating showed up well in the brilliant flickering light.

The Technology delegation made the most of the alliteration in the names of the candidate and the Institute, with transparencies upon which was written "Taft Tickles Tech," "Tech for Taft," "Taft and The Tech." A taxicab, in which were McMurtrie and Saul, vice-president and junior representative of the Technology Republican club, formed one of the principle ornaments of the procession.

Wagons followed the marchers into which, according to O'Meara's orders, all torches were to be put, arrangement being made to return the same in the morning.

Each man received instructions to remove cap and gown before leaving the line. The parade was well policed throughout its entire length.

HAPPINESS AT SMOKER

"How to be happy in one's profession" was the topic of the talk which Frank Chouteau Brown delivered at the Architectural Society smoker last night. At the outset he said that his subject was rather indefinite, but that he could best cover it by examples in his own work. The illustrations he gave were quite amusing and seemed to arouse great enthusiasm among the hearers.

Mr. Brown's talk was followed by a song by William B. Jenkins 1909, after which T. B. Atherton of the same class played a couple of selections on his violin. The next event on the program was hot-dog and beer which drowned out the limerick strains coming from the piano.
